Prometheus and Pandora

Long ago, there were rivers and valleys.
There were oceans and mountains.
There were birds, fish and animals.
But something was missing.
There were no men or women.
The earth was a very lonely place.
Zeus looked at the earth and was not happy.

“The earth is a beautiful place,
but it needs more.
We, the gods, will make a new animal.
He will be called man!”

“Hmm, what will man look like?
He must look different from the other animals.
Eureka! He will look like the gods of Olympus!”

Zeus called Prometheus and Epimetheus.
“You have a very important task,” said Zeus,
“You will make a new animal called man.
Man will walk on two legs.
Animals look downward, toward the earth,
but man must be very different.
Yes, man will look upward, toward the stars.”

Prometheus was a very wise Titan.

He could see the future.

At first, Zeus liked Prometheus.

Prometheus even fought beside Zeus during The Battle of the Titans.

He always tried to help man.
